Kurzbiographie/ short biography	I grew up in a town close to Chengdu in China and have never ever been abroad until I turned 20 years old. My first year of overseas experience in New York astonished me with a world of much more diverse possibilities but also

	left me much confusion about cultural differences and identities. After being studied and lived in Sweden and Germany as an Erasmus exchange student for my bachelor and master degree respectively, I gradually become a curious seeker of my own sense of belonging as a Chinese student abroad. This also motivated me to carry out my doctoral research with a longitudinal approach, to investigate how Chinese students in Germany identify themselves (e.g. culturally, politically and racially) and why/how their identities change during their stay in Germany.
