

Study Guide

MA Modern Sinology

Winter term 2020/21

Welcome

Dear Students,

We extend you a very warm welcome to the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Göttingen! You have chosen to pursue our Modern Sinology Master's programs and are surely very excited about your studies as well as your university life here. To help make your start here as smooth as possible, we have gathered information in this study guide about our department, the Master's program and the various organizational aspects of your studies. Please read all of this information very carefully. Should anything remain unclear to you or should you have any questions about your particular situation, please get in touch with the academic advisor.

Although your studies will center around required coursework, our program also allows you to develop your individual research interests. This study guide outlines such opportunities. You will also find information about the particulars of the Master's program and the options you will have in your chosen program. This information will be invaluable to you as you plan your individual course of study in the coming weeks. Please know, too, that we are always happy to have your feedback about our program; your suggestions will be received positively and incorporated into future iterations of our programs to the extent possible.

You will certainly be kept very busy during your study with us. Alongside the subject-specific coursework, you will also find the intensive language learning very demanding and time-consuming. But it will also be immensely rewarding. By committing yourself to learning about Chinese culture and developing your language skills to a high level, you will open up exciting new horizons in the process. You will also gather invaluable international experience and open new career options for yourselves.

On behalf of all us working in the department, I wish you a lot of fun during your studies and I hope you will feel happy with us.

*Prof. Dr. Axel Schneider
Deputy Head of the East Asian Studies Department*

Teaching and research focus of the department

The discipline of sinology in Göttingen can be considered to be modern with regard to three different aspects: it is modern and contemporary when looking at the period that research is focused on (China from the 17th until the 21st century), modern with its inter-regional and comparative approach (e.g. comparisons with India) and modern in its approach to cooperate with other disciplines of cultural and area studies as well as humanities and social sciences. But what does this mean exactly?

- In order to understand China both with regard to concrete events as well as its self-perception, it is essential to consider its deep historical roots. It is barely possible to cover all aspects in the context of a department and a degree focused on modern sinology, but we nevertheless strive to look into these aspects and discuss and analyze them in different classes dealing with developments in modern China.
- China might be particular and in some aspects even unique. However, a lot of developments and aspects can only be understood when adopting an interregional approach and making comparisons for example with Europe, India and other regions. In part, we adopt these comparative approaches ourselves and in part, we encourage our students to embark on this path by choosing respective additional classes helpful for these comparisons.
- Sinology as a discipline does not have its own theories or methods but makes use of theoretical and methodological approaches of relevant scientific disciplines, e.g. political science, history, law etc. Methods and theories of these scientific disciplines can be applied to “China” as an object of study, however, they sometimes have to be reconsidered and revised or even judged to be inappropriate or unhelpful. In order to acquire these skills and knowledge and the methodological and theoretical toolkit, it is possible to take classes in a scientific discipline if you choose a module package as part of your degree.

Our research staff represents this approach to Chinese studies. There is for example a chair for modern history and politics, one for modern society and economy, another professor focusing on Chinese as a foreign language as well as one with a focus on global history. Further research staff members focus on law, politics, history, urban studies and literature. In addition, visiting professors and guest lectures extend the range of our course program.

Library

Göttingen State and University Library (Niedersächsischen Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek (SUB)) ranks among the largest libraries in Germany. Since 2009, the Department of East Asian Studies collects books on our new areas of research in addition to the books already collected by the former Department of Sinology.

All books relevant to the study of sinology that are owned by the Department can be found in the Cultural Studies Divisional Library (Bereichsbibliothek Kulturwissenschaften BBK) in the Centre for Cultural Studies (Kulturwissenschaftliches Zentrum KWZ) located in Heinrich-Düker-Weg14.

Opening hours: Monday to Friday 8am to 9pm, Saturday 10am to 6pm.

During exam phases and shortly before term papers are due, the library also opens on Sundays. Further information can be found on the website of the library:

<https://www.sub.uni-goettingen.de/en/news/>

and

<https://www.sub.uni-goettingen.de/en/locations-facilities/locations-and-opening-hours/cultural-studies-divisional-library/>.

When using the computers in the library you have access to all online resources of the SUB as well as the Bibliography of Asian Studies. If you would like to use the data bank CrossAsia that contains a large number of Chinese language sources you need to register with CrossAsia directly. In order to do that please download the appropriate form from the CrossAsia website, fill it in and send it by mail to the General Office of the Department (oas@gwdg.de). The office will officially stamp the form and return it to you for submitting it to CrossAsia.

An overview of some online resources relevant for students of Chinese studies can be found here:

<https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/research/ressources/internetresources/>

On the ground floor of the library in the Centre for Cultural Studies (KWZ) you can also find collections of books assembled by your lecturers that are relevant for your respective classes ("reserved reading shelves" or "Semesterapparate"). These books can only be used within the library and cannot be borrowed. This regulation is meant to ensure that all participants in a class have the chance to access the books and work with them.

If you would like to do group work with some of your fellow students, there are designated group work rooms in the library where you can talk without disturbing other users of the library.

Activities organized by students of the department

Student union

- The student union of the Department of East Asian Studies is the official representative board elected by and responsible for all students of the department.
- Members of the student union can be consulted with regard to all problems, questions, wishes, opinions, suggestions for improvement etc. related to your studies. The student union represents all students vis-à-vis lecturers and university administration.
- The student union is active for the improvement of studies, for example by organizing language partnerships, excursions and parties and the weekly meetings at the pub as well as by providing information on scholarships and internships.

Please keep in mind that you should first refer to the study consultation (Prof Dr. Axel Schneider, please see address list on p. 7 and p. 12) of the Department of East Asian Studies whenever problems are arising!

Further information on the student union of the department can be found here:

<https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/teaching/courses-of-study/student-union/>

Activities organized by the department

Collection of movies and regular movie screening:

The Department of East Asian Studies owns a growing collection of fictional movies and documentaries from and about China. This collection of movies can also be used by the students. Upon request, single copies can be borrowed and watched within the rooms of the department using laptop and projector. If you are interested, please contact Katja Pessl (katja.pessl@phil.uni-goettingen.de)

Every semester, the department is organizing regular movie screenings that students are invited to attend. The topic of the movie screening series is changing from semester to semester.

Academic talks

- Each semester the Department of East Asian Studies organizes a number of talks given by visiting scholars. These scholars can be both from Germany and from abroad and talk on a broad spectrum of topics with regard to modern China.
- Information on these talks can be found online on the website of the department as well as on facebook or twitter. Posters announcing the talks around the offices belonging to the department. Additionally, the talks are announced with the mailing list SinoStud (see above p. 8).

Mentoring program

As you all know from your own experience, to start with a new degree program, probably at a new university can be quite demanding. Our mentoring program is aimed at giving support to our new students. This means support in handling the administrative and organizational challenges of the Master's program and guidance through the wide range of information and advisory services. Moreover, to start at a new university also means to learn about an unfamiliar culture of learning, teaching and discussing and also about unfamiliar hierarchies and procedures of administration. So, what is needed, is not only technical support, but also intercultural training provided by experienced peers! To meet these needs, the Department of East Asian Studies offers a mentoring program for new MA students. Students from our department will be your mentors in order to:

- support you in your initial phase of your stay and your studies in Göttingen
- introduce you to the organizational structure at our university and to the culture of learning, teaching and doing research in Göttingen
- guide you through the information and an advisory services
- support you with organizing you studies online
- supporting you with your administrative matters

The program is coordinated by Christopher Brast, one of our students at the Department. He will establish contacts with our mentors. Please contact him under: mentoring-oas@phil.uni-goettingen.de.

Studying modern sinology

Challenges of the degree

The degree “Modern Sinology“ is particularly suitable for students with a strong cultural and/ or social sciences focused interest in modern China. It further enhances language skills in modern Chinese and is characterized by a close cooperation with different scientific disciplines in cultural and social sciences as well as economic and legal studies.

It is our goal to enable students to profoundly and thoroughly analyze modern China, adopting a well informed and trained methodological and theoretical approach. The main challenges of the degree are language- as well as content and methodology-related.

Professional qualifications

Our graduates are qualified both for an academic career and for all areas of work demanding very good language skills and high cultural competence. Hence they are outstandingly suited for working as analysts, consultants and mediators in transculturally and globally active institutions, organizations and companies.

Possible areas of work are:

- Research and teaching
- International organizations and foundations
- Cultural exchange
- Journalism
- Consulting
- International management of research and science
- Diplomatic service
- International companies

The Faculty of Humanities offers a special advisory service on “Application and career planning” that provides help and support with questions regarding your professional career:

- individual consultation for applications and your career plans (e.g. analysis of your skills, check of application documents and support when looking for internships)
- Large amounts of material informing on key competencies, application processes and areas of work

Further information can be found here: <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/187127.html> and here: <https://www.uni-goettingen.de/beruf-schlueko>

Studying under pandemic conditions

The SARS-CoV-2 pandemic will continue to shape our lives, international travel and studying at the University of Göttingen in the winter semester 2020/2021. Furthermore, the pandemic also leads to ongoing and dynamic changes in the legal and regulatory situation, our academic life and also in our course program. The University of Göttingen has decided that the teaching is done in a hybrid way. This means that there are various teaching formats. Some courses will be taught completely online, other in person and others in mixed formats combining online and in person teaching. The update information on the formats of your courses you may find in the online course program in UniVZ and Stud.IP and on the department's website under the heading "News" (<https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/>).

Structure of the degree program

The Master's program Modern Sinology consists of so-called modules that have to be studied according to the respective official study and exam regulations. A module is a teaching unit that is limited both in time and in the topic covered and consists of one or a couple of different courses. A module usually runs over one or two semesters and can for example consist of a lecture and a seminar or a lecture and a practical course. Thus, a module is not the same as a "course" or a "class". Some courses are so-called polyvalent courses. This means that it depends on the topic of your term paper (i.e. exam) which module this particular class is part of. A module is successfully completed when you have passed the respective exam. Please note that you can take a specific module only once. So, if you choose a course, please make sure that the module the course is offered in is still available for you as part of your degree program!

You receive a certain number of Credits (C; or ECTS, Credits, Credit points (CP)) when you successfully complete a module (i.e. pass the exam). You can find out about the number of credits per module in the study and exam regulations of your degree. These credits give you a rough idea about the amount of work to be invested in a module. One C should roughly equate 30 hours of work.

The Master's program Modern Sinology regularly runs over 4 semesters and consists of units of study worth 120 C. Having passed the MA exam you will receive the degree "Master of Arts" (M.A.). The degree program can be studied as specialist course for the Single Honours MA in Modern Sinology (78 C) and as specialist course for the Joint Honours MA in Modern Sinology (42 C) in combination with one of the subject-external Module Packages (Minor) (one package à 36 C or two packages à 18 C).

The degree program is structured as follows:

Specialist course for Single Honors MA in Modern Sinology	Language classes; classes on different topics and aspects of modern China	78 C
Area of Professionalization	Qualifications outside your major degree	12 C
MA thesis	MA thesis in “Modern Sinology”	30 C
		Total: 120 C

Or:

Specialist course for the Joint Honors MA in Modern Sinology	Language classes; classes on different topics and aspects of modern China	42 C
Subject-external Module Package (Minor)	Classes from a discipline of social sciences or the humanities	36 C
Area of Professionalization	Qualifications outside your major degree	12 C
MA thesis	MA thesis in “Modern Sinology”	30 C
		Total: 120 C

Note:

This study guide is only a summary for your information. Everything you need to know about the structure of your degree and the modules you have to complete can be found in the legally binding version in the study and exam regulations. An overview of all modules of the degree can be found in the catalogue of modules. Both documents and further information can be accessed here:

<https://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/366727.html>

<https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/teaching/courses-of-study/ma-modern-sinology/>

Specialist courses in Modern Sinology

The sinology-related part of your degree consists of both language classes aiming to further enhance your language skills in modern Chinese and of classes on culture, history, philosophy, society, law, politics, economy and religion with regard to China. By choosing your classes carefully you can form your own area of specialization according to your interests. For all classes we consider it very important to continuously refer to language-, area studies-, and scientific discipline-related skills and knowledge.

The degree of sinology consists of a number of language classes in advanced written and spoken Chinese that are spread out over the entire four semesters of your studies. Additionally, you have to successfully complete modules on the state of the art and on case studies with regard to different aspects of modern China. It is your own responsibility to organize your timetable accordingly so that you can complete all the modules that are part of your degree.

When planning your studies and your timetable, please also take into consideration that you have to write a master thesis that will take a lot of time and that is ideally written in the fourth semester of your degree.

Note:

Remember to look up in the catalogue of modules (<https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/teaching/courses-of-study/ma-modern-sinology/>) which modules you have to compulsorily complete before being allowed to take other modules!

Module package

In your degree, you can include a module package consisting of modules from a discipline in cultural studies or social sciences. These module packages usually consist of 36 C and it is necessary to apply for them. It is not possible to just take classes from another discipline as you wish. A module package is regulated in the study and exam regulations of the respective discipline. In the regulations, you can also find information as to which classes can be taken for a module package.

Area of professionalization

12 C of your study are reserved for the so-called “area of professionalization” (including subject specific professionalization modules and so called “key competencies”). You can thereby enhance your skills in areas that you find interesting or consider necessary for your professional career.

Classes in the area of professionalization can be freely chosen from the directory of modules for key competencies of the entire university, the classes offered by the Central Institution for Languages and Key Competencies (ZESS) as well as the respective catalogue of the Faculty of Humanities.

Additionally, it is possible to take classes of the Department of East Asian Studies as a professionalization class. It is not possible though to have a class considered both for your main degree and the area of professionalization.

We strongly encourage students in the Joint Honor degree program to take additional Chinese language classes offered by our department for their area of professionalization.

The following classes can be taken as professionalization classes as well:

B.OAW.MS.31	Languages relevant to Sinology I	(6 C, 4 SWS)
B.OAW.MS.32	Languages relevant to Sinology II	(6 C, 4 SWS)
M.OAW.MS.118	Modern written language II	(3 C / 2SWS)
M.OAW.MS.120	Modern Chinese VI	(9 C / 8 SWS)
M.OAW.MS.021	Modern Chinese VII	(6 C / 4 SWS)

Student counselling on the area of professionalization and on key competencies

The Faculty of Humanities offers special study consultation on key competencies and area of professionalization that you are strongly encourage making use of.

Master thesis

The MA thesis should be finished in the course of your fourth semester of studies. You will receive 30 C for it. Choosing your supervisor depends on the topic that you are interested in. Please visit our website to learn more about our academic staffs' individual research areas. Only staff members holding a PhD (Dr.) can supervise your MA thesis. Consulting with your supervisor, you choose the topic of your MA thesis.

The following requirements have to be met for you to be admitted to write your MA thesis:

- Successfully completed modules of your degree worth 48 C, among it at least 36 C of the area of studies "Modern Sinology"
- Proposal on the topic of your thesis and two supervisors

In the course of preparing and writing your MA thesis you have to complete the module Master Colloquium (M.OAW.MS.019). As part of this module you have to write an exposé of your MA thesis that should contain a draft of the structure of your thesis and a bibliography of relevant primary and secondary sources. The exposé should outline the main research question of your thesis (ca. 5000 words). During the seminar that is part of the MA colloquium all students have to present their research projects in an oral presentation of maximum 30 minutes.

Please keep in mind the following aspects with regard to writing your MA thesis:

- The work time for writing the MA thesis is 6 months from the moment when officially registering with the examination office.
- The topic can only be changed once and only during the first four weeks of the work time.
- The MA thesis has to be handed in at the examination office in time. Two print copies and an electronic version of the thesis have to be handed in.

Further information and forms that have to be filled out can be found here:

<https://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/209430.html>

Language

Chinese language classes to further enhance your language skills also in academic Chinese are an integral part of the degree of Modern Sinology. The language classes are compulsory for all students taking the degree consisting of modules in Modern Sinology worth 78 C (Single Honors MA in Modern Sinology) and partly compulsory for all students in the degree consisting of modules in Modern Sinology worth 42 C (Joint Honors MA in Modern Sinology). Please refer to the study and exam regulations to find out which modules are compulsory for you.

Additional classes

In addition to the compulsory and compulsory elective modules of your degree, the department offers further elective classes focussing for example on film studies, calligraphy and other East Asian languages. Furthermore, the department regularly invites guest lecturers from the PRC and the Republic of China (Taiwan) offering further classes on topics that the department cannot cover with its own staff. You can find an overview of all modules of your degree in the directory of modules that can be accessed here: <https://www.sinologie-goettingen.de/en/teaching/courses-of-study/ma-modern-sinology/> .

Formal recognition of previous external classes and Chinese language skills

If you have started an MA degree in Chinese studies at another university before or if you are native speaker of Chinese, it might be possible to formally recognize some modules previously completed for modules to be completed in this degree, or you might not have to attend the Chinese language classes, respectively. In any case, you should contact the student advisor at the department. Please do not simply not show up for classes because you believe that you do not have to do those. You need an official certificate from the department that officially accepts previous knowledge and classes as equivalent for modules to be taken here.

Learning contracts

Some students might have a conditional admission to the MA degree program Modern Sinology. In this case, you have a so-called learning contract that allows you to complete a certain number of bachelor modules and thereby obtain credit points in the area of sinology that are required for a definite admission to the degree program.

These learning contracts usually run for one year and have to be completed within the first two terms of your MA studies until September 30th. However, some of the BA modules you can complete to fulfill your learning contract require to write a term paper, and the deadline for term papers is September 30th (in the summer term). Therefore, it is not possible for your lecturer to grade your term paper in time when you hand it in on September 30th only. It is possible, however, to extend your learning contract for another term so that you can hand in term papers on September 30th and still be able to fulfill your learning contract. For extensions of learning contracts please contact the study advisor Prof. Dr. Axel Schneider (axel.schneider@phil.uni-goettingen.de) at the Department of East Asian Studies and Björn Pohlmann at the faculty:

Study abroad

It is possible to spend one or two semesters abroad to study or do research in a country where the official language is the modern standard Chinese at a university which has a cooperation agreement with the University of Göttingen. This period of studying abroad is optional and you have to take care for all organizational matters yourself. In order to get your attainments achieved abroad formally recognized and accredited for your MA program you have to conclude a learning agreement in advance, stating the courses and the exams you have to take at the university abroad. For further information please contact the student advisor Prof. Dr. Schneider for the MA program Modern Sinology (axel.schneider@phil.uni-goettingen.de) and the Göttingen International office (<http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/311055.html>). For further information see also: <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/312388.html> and <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/186506.html>

Preparing for your stay abroad

Note:

In the process of applying to a university and for a visa, various documents have to be submitted. Please mind the correct form of the documents and, in particular, the deadlines for the submission!

In order to prepare a stay in the PR China or the Republic of China (Taiwan) we advise you to

- get informed as early as possible on the universities qualified, the procedures for application and the visa regulations;
- contact Göttingen International (<http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/311055.html>);
- make sure that your e-mail address is working and check your mail account regularly in order to receive information in time;
- meet all the deadlines for submitting the necessary documents.

Visa application:

- Get informed on the correct procedure to apply for a visa. Please check: <https://www.visaforchina.org/> for the PR China and https://www.roc-taiwan.org/de_de/cat/28.html for the Republic of China (Taiwan).
- Necessary documents
 - Valid passport (please inquire about how long the passport has to be valid according to the latest regulations).
 - Passport photos (ca. 6-10 photos) for the application and for documents at the host university.
 - In accordance with the length of your stay and the regulations of the host university a medical certificate is needed. The regulations on this are complicated and are changed many times. Please keep informed on the latest regulations and forms! The medical certificate can be issued by the university's medical officer (Betriebsarzt). For this you need to complete a specific form which states that your stay abroad is part of your study program. For this form see <http://www.betriebsarzt.med.uni-goettingen.de/de/content/angebote/196.html>)

Further important issues:

- Get informed on the health and liability insurances you need for your stay abroad.
- Visit a medical doctor and make a health check and check your vaccinations! You can contact also the advice center for travel medicine for students at the University Medical Center Göttingen (UMG): <http://www.betriebsarzt.med.uni-goettingen.de/de/content/angebote/196.html>

Funding opportunities for studying abroad

BAföG for studying abroad (Auslands-BAföG)

The BAföG is a government-sponsored funding program. Even if you are not eligible for BAföG for your studies in Germany you might be eligible for a funding of your studying abroad. Whether you are eligible for applying depends on your residence status and your financial situation (see for further information <https://www.bafög.de/de/ausland---studium-schulische-ausbildung-praktika-441.php>). Please check this with the BAföG office responsible for funding studying abroad:

Studentenwerk Tübingen- Hohenheim
Amt für Ausbildungsförderung Reutlingen
Bismarckstraße 24
72764 Reutlingen
Tel.: 07121-94770
Fax: 07121-94771195

E-Mail: auslandsbafog@sw-tuebingenhohenheim.de
Internet: <https://www.my-stuwe.de/auslandsbafog/>

Grants: DAAD (German Academic Exchange Service)

Depending on the length of your stay abroad, you can apply for different grants. The DAAD offers various funding programs for many countries, including the PR China and the Republic of China (Taiwan). For details see <https://www.daad.de/en/>

Please note the deadlines! In some programs you have to apply one year before you will take up your studies at your host university!

Grants: PROMOS

For a stay of only one semester abroad the “Program for the enhancement of the Mobility of German Students” (PROMOS) offers funding opportunities. For the details please see <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/164293.html>

Please note the deadlines!

How to organize your studies: courses, assignments, exams

Modules and courses

The study program is structured by modules. A module is a teaching unit consisting of defined content to be studied in a given time frame, usually one or two terms. Each module comprises one or several courses and is completed by an exam. The courses within one module can be of different kind:

Lecture (Vorlesung)

Lectures are usually given by professors. Mostly, lectures aim at giving an encompassing overview on a broad field of studies. Students are expected to attend and to follow up the contents in their own studies.

Seminar (Seminar)

In terms of scope, the field of study of a seminar is much more restricted compared to a lecture. The topic of the seminar is dealt with intensively from different perspectives based on readings assigned and prepared for discussion on a weekly basis. You have to contribute in attending actively and / or in giving a presentation. Usual forms of exams are papers and written exams.

Tutorial (Tutorium)

Tutorials supplement lectures and seminars. Usually given by senior students and doctoral students, tutorials provide additional knowledge and skills relevant to the topic of the lecture or seminar. Tutorials are also used to prepare you for the exams and the particular requirements of the course they are part of.

Practical course (Übung)

The field of studies dealt with in a practical course is similar to that of a seminar in terms of scope. Additional to the readings practical assignments are part of the practical course (e.g., conducting interviews, modelling, projects, etc.). Usual forms of exams are presentations, essays or written evaluations of projects.

Colloquium (Kolloquium)

The contents of a colloquium are not defined by a given field of studies of a specific topic. In contrast to seminars and practical courses a colloquium is a forum for an intellectual exchange of ideas on ongoing research projects. Usually, it should be part of the final phase of a degree program a part of the process to conceptually develop and to write a BA or MA thesis. Leading questions, concepts and methods are presents and discussed.

Course catalogue: the UniVZ

The UniVZ is the online course catalogue of the Georg-August-University Göttingen. All courses of the Seminar for East Asian studies are listed according to degree program and term, including the basic details of the courses as for example title, lecturer, timing, room, module the course is allocated to, and course description. The course program is available online four weeks before beginning of term by the latest. The information on course details in UniVZ are binding. The UniVZ is to be found at

<https://univz.uni-goettingen.de/qisserver/rds?state=user&type=0&noDBAction=y&init=y>

Registration for courses: Stud.IP

Stud.IP is the e-learning platform at our university. On this platform the courses are organized and supervised. You can find all the courses of the course program on Stud.IP. Here you can download readings and other teaching material, communicate with other students and, most importantly, with the lecturer who will organize the course on this platform. Thus, you have to register for this course on Stud.IP. This registration is obligatory!

Stud.IP makes many things easier. You can

- create your personal time schedule for your courses;
- search for courses, fields of study, facilities and for lectures, staff and other members of the university;
- retrieve time schedules, reading lists and readings for your courses.

For the login there is no registration necessary. You just use your student's user name (given name.surname) for your first login. You get this user name together with your e-mail address (given name.surname@stud.uni-goettingen.de) when you get enrolled. If you do not have these, please contact the chip card issuing point in the central lecture hall building (ZHG) between lecture halls 010 and 011.

Note:

Stud.IP is using your student's e-mail address of the University of Göttingen by default. Please make sure that this e-mail address is working and check it regularly. The Department of East Asian Studies will always use this e-mail address for official communication!

When you login on Stud.IP for the first time, your Stud.IP account will be created automatically. Please find StudIP under https://www.studip.uni-goettingen.de/?set_language=en_GB&cancel_login=1 . If you have difficulties or problems please contact studip@uni-goettingen.de .

Compulsory attendance

Whereas there is no compulsory attendance for lectures, you are allowed to miss class in language courses and seminars only two times per term without excuse note. In case you miss class for a third time without excuse note the lecturer will give you an additional assignment. In case you miss class for a fourth time without excuse note you won't be admitted to the module examination. In this case, the respective course has to be repeated.

Please note that in language courses, the missed classes are counted for the respective teaching unit (grammar, phonetics, characters, etc.) and not for the course as a whole. Additionally, in the language course there are often assignments given for homework. If you fail to hand in the assignments three times, you cannot be admitted to the module examination.

Absence is excusable in case of sickness (a doctor's certificate has to be submitted), delays because of traffic obstruction (e.g., if bus or train connections are cancelled due to extreme weather conditions) or situations of distress or emergency of family members.

For reasons of fairness, it is necessary to inform the lecturer about an absence as early as possible. Medical certificates or similar attestations have to be submitted in the original to Ms. Nolte in the General Office of the Department of East Asian Studies (KWZ room 0.708; directly or by mail). She will inform all lecturers. Please also note the procedures to be followed when you miss an exam because of illness (see p. 29f).

Academic computation of time

At university there is a particular computation of time. In addition to semester times and deadlines, you need to know two additional concepts.

WLH (weekly lecturing hours; SWS)

Weekly lecturing hours: number of hours that are taught per week for a particular class. Thus, the WLH refer to the time you actually have to attend class. They neither include the time you need for preparation and follow-up work for your classes nor the time for your self-study. The time you need for these parts of your studies varies considerably depending on the kinds of course.

Academic quarter

Class times that are announced with the abbreviation c.t. ("cum tempore", Latin "with time") start 15 later than indicated ("academic quarter"). The abbreviation s.t. indicates that a class starts exactly at the announced time ("sine tempore", Latin "without time").

Academic calendar

Winter term 2020/2021:

Start of semester: 01.10.2020

End of semester: 31.03.2021

First day of lectures: 02.11.2020

Last day of lectures: 12.02.2021

No classes: 24.12.2020-08.01.2021

Summer term 2021

Start of semester: 01.04.2021

End of semester: 30.09.2021

First day of lectures: 12.04.2021

Last day of lectures: 16.07.2021

Lectures will take place as usual in the week following Whitsun.

Further information on semester times and deadlines can be found here:

<http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/47743.html>

Exams

Modules are completed with different kinds of exams. There are both written forms of exams (supervised written tests, term papers, essays) and oral forms of exams (presentations, moderations, oral exams).

Note:

The different kinds of exams are defined in the general exam regulations (APO) and the respective study and exam regulations for your degree (PStO Modern Sinology). The exam to be taken in order to complete a class depends on the module that class is attributed to. The exam for a respective module can be found in the catalogue of modules and among the course details in the online course catalogue UniVZ.

You will have to take a language proficiency test to complete the Chinese language classes of your M.A. degree. Further information on this particular form of exam is given below.

The other exams you have to take are combinations of oral presentations and term papers of different length. You can find out about the length of your oral presentations and the term papers you are supposed to write in the catalogue of modules when checking on the respective module you are completing. Both the presentation and the term papers will be graded and your final grade for a module consists of both the mark for the oral presentation and the mark for the term paper.

Oral presentations are given in class during the semester at a time indicated to you by your lecturer. Term papers have to be handed in at the end of the semester, i.e. in winter terms until March 31 and in summer terms until September 30.

Special forms of exams

Language proficiency test

A language proficiency test refers to all five skills of mastering a language (listening, reading, writing, speaking, translating). It consists of an oral part (listening comprehension and speaking; ca. 20 minutes) and a written part (reading comprehension, translation, text production; ca. 120 minutes). Overall the language proficiency test takes about 150 minutes.

Dates

The dates for the exams are usually already set during the first weeks of the semester. Please get informed about the dates as early as possible online in UniVZ and make sure that you register for the exams in FlexNow (see following page) in good time.

Registration for examinations: FlexNow

All your exams and the results and grades are administered with the help of a software called FlexNow. In order to be allowed to participate in an exam you mandatorily have to register online in FlexNow. This is also the case for term papers handed in at the end of the semester. If you have not registered for the exam online, your term paper cannot be accepted and you cannot receive Credits for the module or course.

FlexNow is the electronic system for administrating exams. In FlexNow you can register for exams, see which exams you have taken so far and which marks you received for it and print a certificate with all exams you have taken so far. FlexNow can be accessed using the following URL <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/45574.html> .

The registration in FlexNow is a formal requirement for taking all kinds of exams. If you do not register in due time for your exams, you will not be allowed to participate in the exam. If you have not register for an exam, you do not have the right to request a repeat exam.

The time period for exam registration usually starts in June (summer term) or in December (winter term), respectively. In case of written exams taking place at university as well as oral exams, the registration period ends seven days before the exam is scheduled. In case of take-home exams and term papers, the registration period ends on the day of the deadline for handing in the paper. This deadline is usually scheduled at the end of the semester. Please check the deadlines and make sure to register at due date!

The website of the exam office can be found here: <http://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/47952.html> .

If you miss an exam because of illness:

You have to hand in a doctor's certificate stating for how long you will probably be unable to take any exam. According to the kind of exam, you have to follow different procedures (see also <https://www.uni-goettingen.de/en/555856.html>)

1. Written exam (Klausur) or oral exam

In the case that a student withdraws from an exam after the withdrawal deadline in FlexNow, the student has to submit a medical certificate at the examination office within three working days (as scan or as original document). A copy has to be submitted to the responsible lecturer, if possible, by mail.

If you want to notify an illness you have to use the online form "Erkrankung – Rücktritt von Prüfungsleistung". To do this, please follow these steps

- Step 1: Open the online form „Erkrankung - Rücktritt von Prüfungsleistung“ or log in in eCampus and go to "Service / Weitere Dienste" where you can find the forms of the exam office. Select the form "Erkrankung - Rücktritt von Prüfungsleistung".
- Step 2: Complete the form, upload a scan of your medical certificate and click "send". The medical certificate has to be submitted in the original only when the exam office ask you to do so. The person in charge for your degree program will process your request and inform you about the decision by e-mail.

Further information on how to use these forms you can find here: Wiki-Link \(https://wiki.student.uni-goettingen.de/support/ecampus/formulare/pruefungsruecktritt\).

2. Written course work (e.g., term paper)

- Submit the medical certificate directly to the lecturer / examiner.
- An extension of the deadline can be granted for the length of your illness (as given on the medical certificate).
- The extension has not to be notified to the examination office. (Please make sure that you are registered in FlexNow for the exam!)

3. Bachelor thesis / Master thesis

- Step 1: Open the online form "Erkrankung - Fristverlängerung Abschlussarbeit" über diesen Direktlink, or log in in eCampus and go to "Service / Weitere Dienste" where you can find the forms of the exam office. Select the form "Erkrankung - Fristverlängerung Abschlussarbeit".
- Step 2: Complete the form, upload a scan of your medical certificate stating clearly and click "send". The medical certificate has to be submitted in the original only when the exam office ask you to do so. The person in charge for your degree program will process your request and inform you about the decision by e-mail. If the requirements are met, you will be granted an extension of the deadline for the length of your illness.

If you have any kind of questions or issues with regard to exams, please contact the examination office of the Faculty of Humanities. The person responsible for the degrees of the Department of East Asian Studies is:

Alexander Fund, M.A.

Coordinator for examinations
Examination Office of the Faculty of Humanities #
(Prüfungsamt der Philosophischen Fakultät)
Humboldtallee 17
37073 Göttingen

Phone: 0551-39 26718

Repeating classes and exams

These are the general rules with regard to repeating classes and exams.

1. All exams that you did not pass (tests, oral exams, term papers etc.) can be repeated. If you have to repeat an exam twice, you are only allowed to repeat an exam a third time after talking to the study advisor of the department who is responsible for your degree. It is necessary to obtain a written statement from the student advisor certifying that you consulted with him/ her.
2. All written tests can either be repeated shortly after the first attempt or later after repeating the respective class. If you decide to repeat the class, there is no right to request a repeat exam at short notice already before the beginning of the class in the following semester. It is also possible to repeat an exam at a later point in time during your studies, but you should keep in mind that some classes are mandatory pre-requirements for others.
3. If you do not participate in an exam although you registered for it in FlexNow and cannot provide a valid reason (e.g. doctor's certificate), this exam will be counted as "failed for reason of non-attendance" and you do not have the right to request a repeat exam.
4. If you fail to pass an exam for a compulsory class although you took the respective exam three times, you ultimately lose the right to be examined in this particular area of studies. After ultimately failing a compulsory module, you will be de-registered from this particular area of studies. This does not regard a potential second area of studies, though. If you ultimately fail an elective module, this does not have any serious consequences – even if it is an elective compulsory module if you are still able to pass the necessary number of modules within the elective compulsory part of your studies. This means that if you have to pass two out of three modules and you fail one of them, there are still two modules left that you can take to fulfil the requirements of your degree.
5. If you fail a term paper, it is not possible to simply rework and edit your paper in order to still pass the exam. It is required to either write a new paper on another topic within the context of the same class or you have to take another class and write a term paper on a new topic in this other class. If a term paper has not been marked yet, it is possible for the lecturer though to read through the paper, provide feedback and hand it back for editing, if the paper was handed in before the official deadline.
6. Some oral presentations are exams or part of an exam and the final grade you receive for a particular module. If this is the case, the above regulations for missing an exam are equally valid. You cannot miss an oral presentation without a good reason (e.g. a doctor's certificate). In this case it is very important that you inform your lecturer before the scheduled date for the presentation that you cannot give your presentation on the assigned date.

Letters of recommendation and evaluations

It is possible that at some point in time during your studies you need a letter of recommendation or an evaluation by the Department of East Asian Studies or one of the staff members. You might need this for example if you plan to spend a term abroad or if you want to apply for a scholarship. In order to be able to process these requests quickly and in an efficient way, we would like to ask you to adhere to the following procedures:

1. Please do NOT contact staff members directly on behalf of a letter of recommendation or evaluation, but always send an e-mail to the General Office of the Department (oas@gwdg.de).
2. Please do this at least four weeks before you need the letter of recommendation/ evaluation. Only if you have a very good reason, we can process these requests if they reach us at short notice.
3. When you send the e-mail to the General Office, please always include the following information:
 - a. Until when you need the letter of reference/ evaluation;
 - b. your full name, date of birth, area of studies, semester that you are currently enrolled in and your student number;
 - c. a print-out from FlexNow listing all exam results of exams you have taken so far;
 - d. what you need the letter of reference/ evaluation for (institution, kind of application that you have to provide a letter of reference/ evaluation for);
 - e. whether it can be formless or whether a form needs to be filled in; in the second case, please attach the form to your e-mail or provide an URL from where it can be downloaded;
 - f. how the letter of recommendation/ evaluation is to be forwarded (post, e-mail directly to the recipient or in a sealed envelope to the student) to whom (possibly name of a person, but in any case institution and address) in which language.
4. If a particular area of studies is of special importance for your application, please mention this as well and also let us know who of our staff members trained you in this area. This is the only way to allow us and consult with the respective staff member when drafting your letter of recommendation/ evaluation.

During the regular staff meetings of the Department we will discuss all these requests and work on the respective letters of recommendation/ evaluations.

At first sight, this procedure might seem very complex and formal, but it ensures that we receive all necessary information in time and can write the letters of reference/ evaluations that you need in an appropriate manner.

Some useful terms

Academic quarter (akademisches Viertel)

Class times that are announced with the abbreviation c.t. ("cum tempore", Latin "with time") start 15 later than indicated ("academic quarter"). The abbreviation s.t. indicates that a class starts exactly at the announced time ("sine tempore", Latin "without time").

Colloquium (Kolloquium)

The contents of a colloquium are not defined by a given field of studies of a specific topic. In contrast to seminars and practical courses a colloquium is a forum for an intellectual exchange of ideas on ongoing research projects. Usually, it should be part of the final phase of a course of studies as part of the process to conceptually develop and to write a BA or MA thesis. Leading questions, concepts and methods are presents and discussed.

Credit ("C")

You receive a certain number of Credits (C; or ECTS, Credits, Credit points (CP)) when you successfully finish a module (i.e. pass the exam). You can find out about the number of credits to receive in the study and exam regulations of your degree. These credits give you a rough idea about the amount of work to be invested in a module. One C should roughly equate 30 hours of work.
